

APA delves into topics with deep curiosity, expert analysis, and affecting true-life stories, for listeners of all backgrounds

City Planning Matters explores a particular relevant issue and topic of city planning confronting cities in each episode.

Land Matters from Lincoln Institute of Land Policy looks at what makes cities tick and reveals how a big part of innovative solutions can be traced back to land.

Strong Towns explores how we can financially strengthen our cities, towns, and neighborhood to make them better places to live.

Upzoned hosts guests to talk in depth about just one big story from the week in the Strong Towns conversation.

The Bottom-Up Revolution features stories of the Strong Towns movement in action with a focus on economic resilience and plan implementation in communities.

Talking Headways, from Streetsblog USA, explores the intersection of transportation, urban planning, and city living.

Evidence In Action asks, What does it look like when evidence drives change for people and communities? We ask influential leaders the tough questions.

Power Station is a podcast to power up change-makers and connect with the frontline non-profit leaders who inspire you.

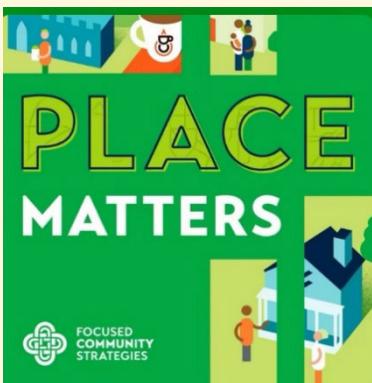

The Messy City takes a deep dive into the world of building codes and reforms that can help make small-scale and missing middle development a reality.

The Placemaking Podcast is meant for the developer looking to continually improve their craft and provide others with wonderful spaces within their communities.

Placemakers, from Slate, brings you stories about the spaces we inhabit and the people who shape them. You'll never look at your community the same way again.

Place Matters looks at intersections of race, place, and poverty, and the belief that the path towards ending inequity and promoting prosperity is through holistic neighborhood development.

Our Creative Connection explores the world of Social Change through the lenses of Participatory Photography, Community Development, and Social Enterprise.

This is Community, from Purpose Built Communities, asks What's the secret to addressing the root of intergenerational poverty? How can we bring in new investment while preserving the history and culture of a place

Urban Planning is Not Boring breaks down complex urban planning concepts and presents them in an accessible and engaging way for listeners of all backgrounds.

The Planning Commission is a cathartic hour each week, where we consider the things that make planners cringe, laugh, and curse their industry.

A Matter of Place is an exploration of the places we shape, and how in turn, those places shape us.

Booked on Planning goes deep into the planning books that have helped shape the world of community and regional planning.

Urban Roots, from Urbanist Media, focuses on preserving places significant to people of color, and looks at how top-down, systemic, and racist decisions have left communities of color bereft still-meaningful physical assets.

GovFuture features interviews and insights from public sector leaders on best practices and innovations in transformative government technology.

The Smart Community is making smart communities that are accessible, liveable, and sustainable for all.

The Current, brings you smart and timely analysis from Brookings experts on breaking news and current policy conversations.

Planning Xchange promotes a better understanding of urban affairs, town planning and city design.

Densely Speaking CONVERSATIONS ABOUT CITIES, ECONOMICS & LAW

Densely Speaking is an interview-based scholarship podcast hosted by an economist at the Federal Reserve Bank of Philadelphia

Economy Matters, From Atlanta Federal Reserve, features in-depth discussions of topics related to the work of the Atlanta Fed, including economic research, bank supervision and regulation.

Redevelopment Trailblazers from the Redevelopment Institute, features public and private sector innovators tackling complex issues to help rebuild America's distressed communities.

Reimagine Rural, from Brookings, explores how locals are enacting positive change in communities and learning how public investment in rural people and places can lead to increased and equitable prosperity.

Rural Matters covers rural education, business, and health to increase awareness, inform discussion, and expand dialogue on the most important issues facing rural stakeholders.

Rural, from WHRO Public Media, explores the history, culture, benefits, and challenges of rural America, and discusses issues of the hollowing out of rural, agrarian communities, and what is replacing this void, if anything.

Pathways to Rural Prosperity, from Entrepreneurial Ecosystems, provides strategies to empower rural community success and vitality.

Rural Impact connects the dots between policy and rural everything. Hear from the problem solvers, advocates, storytellers, and policy pros.

SEDC Insyteful is the official Podcast of the Southern Economic Development Council.

Funding Rural, from Roundhouse Foundation, tells stories of how philanthropy can better serve rural communities and spark systemic change.

Small Talk, from Communities Unlimited, is all about empowering rural communities to unite community and vision and learn from stories of rural revitalization and resilience.

Econ Dev Show explores the strategies, ideas, and insights that are driving economic development forward into the future

Reimagining Government from Centre for Public Impact by BCG is shining a light on government changemakers around the world

Architecture is Political "is where black and brown folks have a conversation about architecture."

The Urbanist, from Monocle Radio, for city mayors, urban planners and architects, is making better cities, be it new technology, state-of-the-art subways or compact apartments.

NextCity discuss urban issues that get overlooked. At the end of the day, it's all about focusing the world's attention on the good ideas that we hope will grow.

The War on Cars is about the epic, hundred years' war between The Car and The City, delivering news and commentary on undoing damage wrought by the automobile.

Good on Paper, from The Atlantic, takes a closer look at the facts and research that challenge the popular narratives of the day, to better understand why we believe what we believe.

GovLove from Engaging Local Government Leaders (ELGL) tells informative and unique stories about work being done at the local government level.

City of the Future explores the innovations and ideas that will transform our cities.

Very Unofficial: An AICP Study Guide Podcast provides a free study resource for the AICP exam.

Beyond Four Walls, from the National Housing Conference, shed light on the persistent affordable housing crisis in America.

Affordable Housing Podcast, from National Association of Local Housing Finance Agencies, explores the reasons behind the housing crisis and how the industry can unite together to discover creative solutions.

HousingWire Daily examines the most compelling housing articles daily and provides a deeper look into the stories that are helping Move Markets Forward.

Power House is about leadership, markets and entrepreneurship in the housing industry.

House of Data explores how data is influencing decisions at the most ambitious companies in housing.

Tax Credit Tuesday, from Novogradac & Company LLP, offers an in-depth weekly look at tax credit topics.

The Urban Lab looks at cities, real estate, and the urban and built environment, featuring leaders in industry, research, and policymaking.

Reinventing Transport provides practical help and encouragement on urban mobility issues for an international audience.

Progressing Planning, from Planning for Justice, explores the role of urban planning in fostering change in contemporary society.

The Streets Are Planning is where Urban Planning, Cities, Hip Hop Culture and Community Development conversations live, featuring unheard voices, stories and impact of community leaders.

UrbanTalk aims to spark a thriving, inclusive, and progressive dialogue around urban planning, design, and development.

The Urbanist Agenda, from the popular YouTube channel Not Just Bikes, the latest topics in urban planning and urban mobility from your favorite urbanist YouTubers.

Building Culture. If we made cultivating beauty and human flourishing our priority, what kind of city would we build? What could your home, your neighborhood and your community look like—and be like?

Talking Transformation is an open conversation addressing contemporary city building and spatial transformation issues in South Africa.

Urban Eyes: Planning in Context, is an urban planning and public health podcast that provides perspective on our socioeconomic environment from different community members.

Urban Resilience Dialogues explores the key themes for urban resilience practitioners, researchers, and policymakers.

On Cities asks, “Did you know that the quality of our daily lives is directly influenced by the design of our built environment?”

Urban Broadcast Collective is a curated network of podcast and radio shows on everything urban.

ISOCARP Spotlight, from International Society of City and Regional Planners, shares the vision of making cities and human settlements inclusive, safe, resilient and sustainable.

Scratching the Surface features wide-ranging, in-depth conversations with designers, architects, writers, academics, artists, and theorists about how design shapes culture.

99% Invisible is a weekly exploration of the process and power of design and architecture.

The Aesthetic City interviews experts in the fields of architecture, urban planning, and urban design to find out how we can improve our cities, our architecture, and our streets, in order to create more friendly and beautiful places.

Archispeak asks "What's it really like to work in architecture?" The hosts of Archispeak know, and they're here to share real-life experiences.

Urbanistica is about the making of smarter and more livable cities.

Profiles in Public Service breaks down common myths about government by highlighting the critical ways in which federal employees have demonstrated bold leadership to protect our health, safety and general well-being.

Design and the City interviews visionary architects, trailblazing urbanists and creative thought-leaders with the same mission of how we can make cities more livable and lovable.

Second Studio is an explicit podcast about design, architecture, and the everyday.

Yeoman. We discuss a lot of things: building beautiful places, Ivan Illich, Corbu, Brave New World, HOAs, forces of institutionalization and atomization, books

Townbuilders is a production of the National Townbuilders Association, the implementers of the New Urbanism. The NTBA is a group of the leading developers, builders and architects building walkable new urban

Climate Justice Y'all is dedicated to “lifting up and centering the climate and environmental justice movement in the South.”